CHAPTER 3: GOPAL AND THE HILSA-FISH

Gopal and the Hilsa-fish

~Summary~

-by Narendra Bijweall

The story "Gopal and the Hilsa-fish" begins with the fact that it was the season for the Hilsa-fish. People all over the place had nothing to speak except Hilsa. However, the king was irritated after hearing the discussion about the fish. When the courtier came in front of the king to talk about the fish, the king burst out in anger. Later on, the king realised his mistake and apologised to him. The reason behind his anger was that everyone was speaking about Hilsa. The king stated that not even Gopal can stop anyone from talking about Hilsa-fish, not for even about five minutes. Later on, Gopal agreed that he would accept the task. After a few days, Gopal decided to go to the market in a disguise. He had applied ash on his face and seemed to be half-shaven and dressed in torn clothes. Everybody noticed his appearance and judged him as a madman. When Gopal reached the palace, he was stopped by the guards. He danced and sang to seek the attention of everyone and distract them from noticing the fish in his hand. Later on, the king heard his call, and so he ordered his guards to bring the crazy man inside the palace.

One of the courtiers instantly recognised him. Finally, Gopal revealed that no one had spoken about the fish because people were busy judging him.

They were discussing Gopal's appearance rather than looking at the fish in his hand. Thus, Gopal won the challenge, and the king appreciated him for his victory.

~Conclusion~

Gopal was one of the wise men in the king's court. When the king was fed up with ongoing talks about Hilsa fish he challenged Gopal. Gopal happily accepted the challenge of buying a huge Hilsa fish from the market and to ensure on the way from the market to the palace no one should talk to him about the fish.
